NHA Opens Third Affordable Assisted Living Facility in Colorado

Published: June 2009

Situation

Expand the affordable, quality care and services offered to seniors at The Residence at Oakridge and The Residence at Grand Mesa to seniors living in Colorado Springs.

Solution

To identify an area able to support an affordable assisted living facility, NHA first conducted a detailed market and financial feasibility study of Colorado Springs. After confirming the area as a prime location, NHA formed an entity to fund the venture and own the facility. NHA soon found an affordable, appropriate piece of land for the facility and facilitated the purchase of the land for the ownership entity, including performing due diligence, handling the legality of the purchase agreement and seeking and securing all necessary zoning and planning jurisdictional approvals. Despite setbacks beyond NHA's control, NHA's commitment to the project never waived and it continued to pursue its implementation. As a result, after seven years, NHA obtained the necessary equity and debt, including a private activity bond allocation, retained a design and construction team for final document development and pricing and obtained final jurisdictional approvals including building permit.

On September 12, 2008, NHA closed on the funding and started construction of The Residence at Skyway Park. Throughout development, NHA acted as project manager and developer. As such, NHA was responsible for architecture and engineering coordination, equipment and furnishing planning, interior design and construction coordination. This also included local, state and federal jurisdictional approvals, contract negotiation, inspections, and controlling budget, scope and schedule.
